Tax Law & Policy Seminar Series: Michael Simkovic

Time: 4:30pm

Location: Gittis 213, Kushner Classroom

Professor Michael Simkovic will be presenting his paper "The Knowledge Tax" at the Tax Law & Policy Seminar.

Professor Simkovic's research focuses on the intersection between law and finance, with a particular emphasis on credit markets, financial regulation, and taxation. His work has appeared in leading journals including The University of Chicago Law Review, The Journal of Corporate Finance, and the Journal of Legal Studies. In 2015, he received the American Law Institute's Young Scholars Medal and became an elected member of the American Law Institute.

In 2012, he won the American College of Consumer Financial Services Lawyers award for Best Professional Article. In 2013 and 2014, he was voted among the most influential in legal education by National Jurist Magazine.

Professor Simkovic has served as a visiting professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill and as a visiting scholar at Fordham University.

Before joining the Seton Hall faculty, Professor Simkovic was an attorney at Davis Polk & Wardwell in New York and a strategy consultant at McKinsey & Company, specializing in legal, regulatory and business issues affecting financial services companies; and an Olin Fellow in Law and Economics at Harvard Law School.

At Seton Hall, in addition to his research and traditional teaching, Professor Simkovic helps develop online courses for the master's degree in financial compliance.
