

LALSA 2017 Conference: DACA and the State of Immigration Law in the United States

January 19 & 20, 2017 at the University of Pennsylvania Law School

Top practitioners from Philadelphia and across the country will gather to analyze what recent Supreme Court decisions on immigration mean for recent immigrants, the law, and the legal profession.

Our January 19th kickoff will feature the Philadelphia premiere of Farewell Ferris Wheel, a film that explores the $500 million carnival industry's reliance on the controversial H-2B visa to recruit migrant workers from Mexico each summer. The screening, which will offer an opportunity to see the film in advance of its PBS broadcast later in the year, will be followed by a panel discussion featuring the film's directors, advocates, and others with industry experience. Click here (<https://vimeo.com/164848321>) for a trailer of the film. Click here (<http://www.hollywoodreporter.com/review/farewell-ferris-wheel-film-review-908304>) for a recent review from The Hollywood Reporter.

January 20th will involve two panels covering 1) the state of executive action post US v. Texas and 2) queer identity and immigration. Lunch will be provided, with firm networking opportunities for law students at firm-sponsored booths.

We are happy to announce that this year's second panel will be sponsored by Penn Lambda.

Who can attend?

Law students, graduate students, and practitioners from the Philadelphia area are all welcome to attend. We plan to offer CLE credit for the event and will confirm as the conference nears.

How much does it cost?

Attendance at the conference, including lunch, is free for all who RSVP. CLE credits may incur extra fees.

How can I get involved?

To attend, please send an RSVP to Penn LALSA using the form (TBA in late November 2016). To sponsor the event, and be featured in our conference program and on our website, please email lalsa@law.upenn.edu for details.
