SYMPOSIUM

FROM THE LAW LIBRARIAN'S WINDOW
by Elizabeth S. Kelly, Director of Biddle Law Library

The telephone rings often in the Reference Department of Biddle Library. That is as it should be. Frequently the callers are you, our Alumni. Many of the calls are local, but some of you call from outside the Philadelphia area. A large number of you call on us through your secretaries or through your law firm librarians. We are pleased that Biddle Library continues to be a resource that you find useful. There is every reason to maximize Biddle's value for the legal community.

When I came to Biddle in 1984, I learned that for decades a small, dedicated staff at Biddle had been responding to requests for information from Alumni and were doing a terrific job within the very stringent constraints that Biddle's own budget required. Those budget constraints prevented the Library from photocopying articles or statutes which you needed. Usually, the best that we could do was to check on the availability of what you wanted from the Library, and then request that you send a messenger to photocopy it. Few of our long-distance callers could be helped.

We have changed that system and, in so doing, have changed the constraints. We now employ someone who can photocopy the journal articles, the foreign statutes, and the specialized items which may not be accessible in other libraries. This same person can dispatch the photocopy to you by the means you select: telefax (supply us with your telefax number), any of several next day delivery services, or regular or express mail via the U.S. Postal Service.

We can now offer this expanded service to all Alumni because it has been placed on a cost-recovery basis. The costs of our new service, for the unusual items that you might seek, actually may be less than those of a courier. Normally, we will dispatch the photocopy (or tell you why we cannot) for delivery the working day after we receive the request.

There is a special phone number for the new photocopy service: (215) 898-9387. You will need to give us: 1) a citation for the item

The !!! Glorious !!! Biddle Gala - A Smashing Success on Every Front

"The Law School never looked more resplendent...Biddle should celebrate a birthday EVERY year!!!...An extraordinary event - the best of the spring season!!!...the ambiance and spirit of the evening will last and last....!!!"

Such were the comments of the more than two hundred guests in attendance at the long-awaited Biddle Law Library's Centennial Anniversary celebration, held Saturday evening June 7, 1986. The Gala theme, evoking the era of Gilbert and Sullivan, framed the festivities, which included a performance of Trial By Jury characters gracing the walls of the School, and members of the Law School Light Opera Company performing medleys of G & S hits during the cocktail hour. "'Members' of the British Guard greeted guests as they entered the School.

The evening began with a champagne toast at the Sylvan M. Cohen Gateway to Biddle Library, followed by cocktails and hors d'oeuvres at the elaborately decorated Goat. Dinner was served in the tented Law School Courtyard to the music of the Mark Davis Orchestra. Three members of the Biddle family - Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Biddle and Mr. Stephen Biddle - were present and, through the generosity of the Law School Class of 1950, members of the newly-graduated Class of 1986 were able to attend the Gala. Recent alumni graduates were given the opportunity to welcome their younger colleagues to the Biddle Law Library. The evening was capped by a surprise final flourish - the Garden Faire.

The Biddle Law Library Centennial Celebration Committee co-chaired by Alma and Sylvan M. ('38) Cohen and Lynn and Glen A. ('66) Tobias together with the Law School's Assistant Dean for Alumni Affairs, Alice B. Lonsdorf, the endeavor proved a glowing achievement. The women of the Committee - Fanchon Apfel, Susie Auten, Beth Barrile, Gladys Bernstein, Annette Borish, Alma Cohen, Mimi Dimeling, Charlotte Feldman, Vicki Fox, Bonnie Harkins, Elizabeth Kelly, Bobby Leidner, Guna Mundheim, Sandra Newman, Bobby Rosin, Lucy Sayre, Mary Ellen Schwab, Porc Segal, Cookie Otani-Smith, Roberta Tanenbaum, Eleanor Tarbox, Judy Thomas, Lynn Tobias, Mildred Weisberg and Barbara White - ALL made tremendous contributions toward the Gala's success, each by sharing her particular professional and creative expertise in the effort. The members of the Committee were lauded by Dean Robert H. Mundheim at a celebratory lunch given in their honor by Gala co-chairs, Alma Cohen and Lynn Tobias, at The Garden in mid-July.
In April, 1986, Professor W.A.J. (Alan) Watson was designated University Professor. He came to the Law School from Edinburgh in 1979 as Professor of Law and Classical Studies, and became Director of the School's Center for Advanced Studies in Legal History in 1980. In 1984, Professor Watson was made Nicholas F. Gallicchio Professor of Law. The author of 18 books (the most recent a four-volume translation of Justinian's Digest, University Press) and over 75 articles, he is noted for his work in history and philosophy as well as in law.

Professor C. Edwin Baker is the new Nicholas F. Gallicchio Professor of Law. Prior to his coming to the Law School in 1981, he taught at the University of Oregon Law School. Mr. Baker's undergraduate studies were done at Stanford University, and he received a J.D. from Yale Law School in 1972. He has written extensively on Law and Economics, Legal Philosophy, the First Amendment and the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Professor Baker teaches primarily in the area of Constitutional Law.

Professor Stephen B. Burbank was promoted to full Professor of Law as of July 1, 1986. He received both his A.B. and his J.D. degrees from Harvard and, during the October 1974 Term, was Clerk to Chief Justice Warren Berger of the United States Supreme Court. From 1975-1979, Professor Burbank was General Counsel to the University of Pennsylvania. He became a full-time Faculty member in 1979, teaching in the areas of Civil Procedure, Evidence and Conflict of Laws.

The School's 1986 Faculty appointments include:

Associate Professor Charles W. Mooney, Jr., teaches Sales and Creditors' Rights. He received his B.A. degree from the University of Oklahoma in 1969 and his J.D. from Harvard Law School in 1972. Mr. Mooney practiced in Oklahoma City from 1972 to 1981 and, then, went to New York City where he became a partner at Shearman & Sterling, concentrating on domestic and international financing transactions and banking law.

Professor Mark J. Roe was at Rutgers Law School in Newark, NJ for the last several years, where he taught Antitrust and Corporate Finance. He practiced law until 1980 and, since then, has written on the subject of Corporate Reorganization in Bankruptcy.

Assistant Professor Susan P. Sturm teaches Remedies and Income Security. An Alumna of Brown University and Yale Law School, where she was an Editor of the Law Journal, Professor Sturm clerked for Judge Charis Ward of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. She was a Karpatin Fellow for the American Civil Liberties Union and, for a time, practiced law both in Boston and New York City.

The seven Visiting Professors for 1986-1987 include:

Visiting Professor James B. Atleson, who is Professor of Law at the State University of New York at Buffalo, where he has taught courses in Labor Law, Collective Bargaining and Arbitration, Internal Union Democracy, Law and Labor History and Negotiations. He teaches a section of the first-year Labor Law course and a seminar on Worker Participation and Ownership.

Visiting Associate Professor Stephen Calkins is Associate Professor at Wayne State University Law School where he has taught courses in Antitrust, Corporations and Torts. At Penn Law School, he teaches a course in Corporations and a seminar on Mergers and Acquisitions.

Visiting Professor Daniel Friedmann is Professor of Law and former Dean of the Faculty of Law of Tel Aviv University, where he taught courses in Contracts, Insurance and Restitution. He has been a member of several Legislative Committees appointed by the Minister of Justice of Israel and, recently, was a member of a Commission of Enquiry appointed by the President of the Supreme Court of Israel to investigate price regulation of bank shares.

Visiting Professor of International Law, Maurice Mendelson has been a Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford University since 1975, and has been a practicing member of the English Bar since 1972. At this Law School, Professor Mendelson teaches courses in Public International Law and The International Law of the Sea.

Visiting Professor Todd D. Rakoff teaches Contracts, Consumer Protection and Administrative Law at Harvard Law School. He clerked for Judge Henry J. Friendly and practiced law in Boston prior to choosing a career in teaching.

Visiting Associate Professor Peter M. Roth, LL.M.'77, is a Barrister practicing in England, primarily in the field of Commercial Law.

Visiting Associate Professor David Rudovsky has practiced Civil Rights, Civil Liberties and Criminal Law in the Philadelphia firm of Kairys & Rudovsky and, since 1967, as counsel to the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee. He previously taught Trial Advocacy at Penn Law School. Professor Rudovsky was the recipient of a 1986 MacArthur Foundation Fellowship (See The Faculty in this issue of The Journal).
Three new Administrators have joined the Law School Community:

Susan P. Davison rejoined the newly-expanded Law School Development Staff in July as the second Assistant Director of Development. She spent the last two years in the Development Office as Administrative Assistant to Donald G. Myers, Director of Development. Ms. Davison received her B.A. degree in English from Middlebury College and worked for a small law firm in southern Vermont before moving to New York City, where she spent several years in the recruiting office of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett on Wall Street. In her present position, Ms. Davison manages the regional Annual Giving Campaign, organizes correspondence and special projects for the Director of Development and plans small group functions.

Min J. de Collingwood, the new Assistant Director of Placement and Career Planning, came to the Law School from Pennsylvania State Government. Appointed in December, 1979, by Pennsylvania Governor Dick Thornburgh, Ms. de Collingwood directed the Governor’s Hispanic Council, serving as the Governor’s Chief Liaison and Representative for Hispanic policy issues. She also lobbied to generate new public and private funding for community-based service programs. Prior to that experience, Ms. de Collingwood was a policy analyst and community relations specialist with the Latino Project, a branch of the Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia. (PILCOP). She earned a B.A. degree in Sociology from Chestnut Hill College and a Master of Social Services degree with a concentration in Planning and Administration from the Bryn Mawr College Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research. As Assistant Director, Ms. de Collingwood assists students with their career plans and helps coordinate recruiting programs both on-campus and throughout various cities of the United States.

Constance C. Kessler is the Law School’s new non-academic advisor to the L.L.M.-Graduate students. She arranges extracurricular activities as well as an introduction to the American Court System for the international group, which comes to the School from the United States as well as numerous foreign countries. Mrs. Kessler also assists with Law School special events and coordinates Perspectives ‘86–’87, a series of lectures presented to the Law School Community featuring Law School Overseers, Alumni and other noted scholars. Mrs. Kessler attended the University of Pennsylvania and received a B.A. from The George Washington University. Prior to coming to the Law School, she was Director of Development at St. Peter’s School and cultivated the catering business at Eden Restaurant in Philadelphia.

THREE FACULTY MEMBERS RETIRE

Law School Professors Martin J. Aronstein, ’65, Noyes E. Leech, ’48, and Ralph S. Spritzer retired from teaching in June. Over the years, their extraordinary scholarly endeavors and noteworthy contributions to the legal profession and to society-at-large have brought honor and prestige to this Law School.

Professor Martin J. Aronstein, ’65, has “worn the hats” of many professions in addition to those of lawyer and teacher. An MBA from Harvard Business School qualifies him in the field of Business Management while a B.E. from Yale University certifies his credentials as a Mechanical Engineer. He has been Chairman of the American Bar Association’s Committee of Stock Certificates, and he was the draftsman of the 1977 Amendments to the Uniform Commercial Code. Professor Aronstein taught courses in Commercial Transactions, Accounting and Creditors’ Rights while at the Law School. Now, upon retirement from teaching, he is of counsel to the Philadelphia firm of Morgan, Lewis & Bockius.

Professor Noyes E. Leech, ’48, the William A. Schnader Professor of Law Emeritus, received his A.B. and J.D. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania. A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Editor-in-Chief of The University of Pennsylvania Law Review, Mr. Leech returned to the School in 1949 before practicing in a Philadelphia law firm for one year and has remained for most of these thirty-seven years as a member of the Penn Law Faculty. Throughout his teaching career, Professor Leech was actively involved in affairs of the University Senate, as its Chair and as the chairman of a committee which drafted procedures for faculty consultation on University appointments and tenure. At the Law School, he taught Bills and Notes, International Law and Corporations; he edited casebooks on The International Legal System and on Corporations and, with Dean Mundheim, founded and was General Editor of The Journal of Comparative Business and Capital Market Law. Now that he is retired, Mr. Leech continues to work on The International Legal System casebook and is endeavoring to perfect his techniques on the cello. (A reprint of the tribute paid by Dean Robert H. Mundheim to Professor Ralph S. Spritzer received his B.S. and LL.B. degrees from Columbia University. After serving in World War II, he worked for the Federal Government as a trial attorney with the U.S. Justice Department. Mr. Spritzer was General Counsel for the Federal Power Commission and was the First Assistant in the U.S. Justice Department’s Office of the Solicitor General, where he argued more than sixty cases in the United States Supreme Court on behalf of the U.S. Government. While at Penn Law School, he taught Criminal Procedure, Antitrust, Regulation of Industry and a seminar on Litigation. Professor Spritzer has “retired” to teaching at the Arizona State University College of Law, and also plans to “practice law” occasionally.

Professor Leech upon his receiving the Law Alumni Society’s Distinguished Service Award on Law Alumni Day, together with Mr. Leech’s acceptance speech, appears in the Featured Events section of this issue of The Journal).
The Law School Retirement Dinner
In May, 1986, a Dinner honoring retiring Professors Aronstein, Leech and Spritzer was held at the Wharton-Sinkler Conference Center in suburban Philadelphia. Highlighting the evening were the moving tributes offered by the Faculty to their retiring colleagues, as well as the presentation to the Law School by Dean Robert H. Mundheim of photographic portraits which were taken of the three Professors. The photos, which are on display permanently at The Goat, replace the oil portrait tradition which has been the Law School's custom over the years.

New Law School Chairs
Two endowed Chairs were established at the Law School in the year 1986:

The William B. Johnson Corporate Law Chair was established through a $1.25 million gift from IC Industries of Chicago to honor William B. Johnson, of the Class of 1943 and a Law School Overseer, for his 20 years as the Company’s Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. In his announcement of the newly-established Chair, Dean Robert H. Mundheim stated, “The holder of the William B. Johnson Chair will teach and, through scholarly research and writing, will contribute to the fundamental rethinking of corporate law now taking place in the courts, legislatures and regulatory agencies.”

The Bernard G. Segal Professorship of Law, to be held by the Dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, was created to honor the esteemed Alumnus, Bernard G. Segal of the Class of 1931. A substantial sum already has been endowed for the Segal Chair, and completion for total funding is projected for the end of the year 1986.

Gifts and Bequests
Ruth H. Levine has contributed a gift of $10,000 to the Biddle Law Library Endowment Fund honoring the memory of her late husband, Leonard A. Levine. The income of the Endowment Fund is used to acquire books for the Library. An appropriate bookplate memorializing Mr. Levine will appear in the books purchased in his name.

Parents and Partners Day - 1986
On Friday, November 7, first-year students and their parents, spouses and/or friends are invited to what has become an annual event at the Law School - Parents and Partners Day.

The families of newly-matriculated law students will be afforded the opportunity to witness firsthand the Law School experience by spending the morning attending the Contracts Class of Professor Clyde W. Summers and the Criminal Law Class of Professor Michael Madow. Afternoon presentations will include a message from Dean Robert H. Mundheim, and three Panel discussions featuring Law School Professor Robert A. Gorman, Alumni/a Clive S. Cummis; ’52; Gilbert F. Casellas, ’77, and The Honorable Norma L. Shapiro, ’51, and third-year students Cheryl Croteau, Brian Doerner and Janice King Robinson. A box lunch for students and guests at The Goat will complete the day.

Alumni Gatherings
During the spring, summer and fall months, the Law Alumni Society, Regional Alumni groups and the Law School Development Office sponsored events geared towards maintaining close affiliations between the Law School and its Alumni. Dean Robert H. Mundheim was in attendance at many of the functions.

Richard B. Smith, ’53, Partner in the New York City firm of Davis, Polk & Wardwell, was presented the Law Alumni Society’s Award of Merit by Dean Robert H. Mundheim at the Society-sponsored Cocktail Reception held at the 1986 Meetings of the American Bar Association on Sunday, August 10, 1986 at the Sheraton Centre Hotel in New York City. The Alumni Annual Giving Kickoff Meeting and Dinner was held at the Faculty Club on September 17. On September 27, the Law Alumni Society sponsored its annual Cocktail Reception at the Philadelphia Bar Association’s Annual Conference & Exposition at Bally’s in Atlantic City, NJ, where it honored the newly-elected Chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association, Seymour Karland, of the Law School Class of 1957.

In October, The Honorable James Hunter, III, ’59, of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, was honored at a Dinner at the Hyatt Regency in New Brunswick, NJ. The Friends of Biddle Library Annual Giving Kick-Off Breakfast was held on October 1. Dean Robert H. Mundheim was the guest at a Dinner given in his honor by European Alumni held on October 18 in London, England.

Professor Louis B. Schwartz Delivers 1986 Roberts Lecture
Benjamin Franklin Professor of Law Emeritus and Professor of Law at Hastings College of the Law in San Francisco, CA, Louis B. Schwartz,'35, presented the 28th Annual Owen J. Roberts Memorial Lecture entitled "Justice, Expediency and Beauty" on October 9, 1986 at the University Museum. Established to honor the late Owen J. Roberts, the 11th Dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and an Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, the Lecture is supported by an endowment awarded by the Philadelphia firm of Montgomery, McCracken, Walker & Rhoads, and is sponsored by the Order of the Coif, the University of Pennsylvania Law Alumni Society and the Law School.

The 1986 Edwin R. Keedy Moot Court Competition - November 20
Associate Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, of the United States Supreme Court, will preside over the illustrious Bench which includes The Honorable Arlin M. Adams,'47, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and The Honorable Anthony J. Scirica, of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, to determine the winners of the 1986 Keedy Cup on November 20 at the University Museum, 34th & Spruce Streets.

The Annual Benefactors Dinner
The Down Town Club in Philadelphia was the site of the 1986 Benefactors Dinner on Tuesday, October 14.

The event began at 5:30 p.m. with a private tour of the Constitutional Convention Bicentennial Exhibition which is on display at the Second Bank of the United States, 420 Chestnut Street. After viewing the exhibit, cocktails from 6:15 p.m. and dinner at 7:15 were served at The Down Town Club, which offered a picturesque view of Independence Hall.

The Long-Range Planning Committee
Dean Robert H. Mundheim has instituted a new Law School Committee "triggered by the need to address the crowding of the Law School's present facilities as a result of twenty years of ad hoc responses to changes in legal education. There is the need to deal with the cramped state of present Law School facilities and the end of the useful life of the Law School dormitories. Decisions on building require answers to a series of questions about the future of legal education and the role of the Law School in society.' The Committee, composed of Law School Alumni, Overseers, Faculty and Administration, include: The Honorable Arlin M. Adams,'47, Chair; David Berger,'56; Richard P. Brown, Jr.'48; Gary Clinton, the Law School Registrar and representative of the Administration; The Honorable Edward S.G. Dennis, Jr.,'73; Raymond K. Denworth, Jr.,'61; Joseph P. Flanagan, Jr.,'52; John G. Harkins, Jr.,'58; William F. Hyland,'49; Harold E. Kohn, '37; Professor Noyes E. Leech,'48, the Faculty representative to the Committee; Harry K. Madway,'36; Daniel J. McCauley, Jr.,'41; Jane Lang McGrew,'70; Allen J. Model,'80; the Law Alumni Society's Liaison to the Committee; Myles H. Tannenbaum,'57; Glen A. Tobias,'66; and Dean Mark G. Yudof,'68.

The Law School Faculty was consulted on the Long-Range Planning concerns at their annual retreat held this past summer.

Assistant Dean Lonsdorf Moves On
After six years as Assistant Dean for Alumni Affairs, Alice B. Lonsdorf has left the Law School. For more than four years of her tenure, Mrs. Lonsdorf was responsible for Alumni functions and activities which included the coordination of quarterly Law Alumni Society Meetings, Law Alumni Society and regional Alumni receptions, Quinquennial Class Reunion parties, the annual Law Alumni Day celebration, and the annual Benefactors Dinners. Prior to her leaving the School in July, Mrs. Lonsford coordinated the highly successful Biddle Library 100th Anniversary Gala held on June 7, 1986.

Mrs. Lonsdorf also was the non-academic advisor to the L.L.M. Graduate students who matriculate at the Law School each year. She developed the now-existing program, of which the L.L.M./Alumni Friendship Program is a vital part, which helps ease the cultural and social adjustments faced by the students coming to this country and to the Law School.

The Law School Stands Up to Inspection
The American Bar Association/Association of American Law Schools accreditation team, headed by Dean Norman Redlich of the New York University Law School, visited Penn Law School for three days in February, 1986 to make its annual seven-year reinspection tour.

New Appointments to the Board of Overseers
Four Law School Alumni joined the ranks of the Board of Overseers at the annual fall meeting on October 9, 1986. They include: O. Francis Blondi,'58, Senior Partner in the Wilmington, Delaware firm of Morris, Nichols, Arsht & Tunnell; Raymond K. Denworth, Jr., '61, Managing Partner in the Philadelphia firm of Drinker, Biddle & Reath; Theodore J. Kozlowski,'67, Partner in the New York City firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom; and Lipman Redman,'41, Partner in the Washington, D.C. firm of Meltzer, Redman & Garth. At that time, Chesterfield H. Smith and Harold M. Williams stepped down from the Board.

The "New" Journal of International Business Law
For eight years, The Journal of Comparative Business Law has published under the editorial guidance of Dean Robert H. Mundheim and William A. Schneider Professor of Law Emeritus, Noyes E. Leech. Under its new name and publishing arrangement, The Journal will continue to provide quality scholarship concerning legal developments in the international business community from prominent authors around the world. In addition to its traditional focus on capital markets, The Journal publishes articles in such fields as trade, international finance, taxation and dispute resolution. Four issues will be published annually.

The Editorial Board for the 1986-87 academic year includes: Jennifer Rosato, Editor-in-Chief; Valerie Ruttenberg and Robert Wallingford, Executive Editors; Evan Cohen, Andrew Kent and Elayne B. Cothran, Article Editors; and Kirk Johnson and Michele Testen, Comment Editors. The staff looks forward to bringing increased recognition to The Journal and to the University of Pennsylvania Law School as a result of their efforts.

To subscribe to the NEW Journal for one year, beginning with the inaugural December 1986 issue, please send $27.50 to: Executive Editor for Management, The University of Pennsylvania Journal of International Business Law, 3400 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104-6204.

The purpose of the Challenge is to raise an additional $300,000 in NEW gifts to the Law School. Gifts to the Challenge Fund, as well as those to be matched by the Fund will be contributions above and beyond the gifts of the donors to last year's campaign.

A Successful 1985-86 Firm Solicitation Program
The Annual Giving Firm Solicitation Program, having completed its third year in operation, has done well thanks to the dedicated efforts of the firm solicitors. The total amount collected during the year 1985-86 from the Philadelphia program was $208,578; the total of $81,951 was collected from firms in New York and New Jersey. Those which deserve special recognition for having achieved 100% participation in cash from all firm Alumni were Hangley, Connolly, Epstein, Chicco, Foxman & Ewing; Hoyle, Morris & Kerr; and Kleinbard, Bell & Brecker - all of Philadelphia. The New York City firms with 100% participation were Davis, Polk & Wardwell and Proskauer, Rose, Goetz & Mendelsohn. In New Jersey, the firm of Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland & Perretti also reached 100% participation. These statistics indicate great enthusiasm and support for the Law School. The undertaking of this endeavor by all firm solicitors and participants is great.

NEWS FROM THE INSTITUTE FOR LAW AND ECONOMICS
Future Conferences, Projects, etc.
The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has awarded a grant to the Institute for Law and Economics to sponsor a Spring 1987 conference on the optimal roles for the private and public provision of retirement income. University Professor of Finance, Susan M. Wachter, is organizing that Conference. The Institute is currently funding several Faculty research projects and is providing research fellows to work in association with Law professors. This year, students have received both Norman and Rosita Winston Foundation Fellowships and Institute Fellowships in an expanding effort to promote interdisciplinary research at the University.

ANNUAL GIVING UPDATE
The Challenge
Law Annual Giving 1986-87 is endeavoring to raise $1,500,000 from 50% of the Law School Alumni. In order to accomplish this ambitious goal, a group of Alumni have joined together to establish a challenge fund of $150,000 to match first-time gifts to the Law School, gifts of donors who join the Benjamin Franklin Society for the first time and gifts of donors who increase their giving within the

The Firm Reception Program
This Program was successful during the year 1985-86 as a vehicle for bringing the Law School to Alumni. Receptions held at the New York City firm of Sullivan & Cromwell and at the Philadelphia firm of Montgomery, McCracken, Walker & Rhoades were attended by Alumni firm members, Dean Robert H. Mundheim and Law School representatives. Other such receptions are planned for the forthcoming year with an emphasis on Faculty involvement.

PENN LAW PEOPLE IN THE NEWS
This Journal feature highlights members of the Law School Community (Alumni, Faculty, Overseers, Students, etc.) whose appearances in the news media have come to our attention primarily through the University news clipping service.

The Honorable Arlin M. Adams,'47, who was a guest at Skidmore College in March as a Woodrow Wilson Foundation Visiting Fellow, was the subject of the March 11, 1986 Glen Falls, NY Post-Star article entitled, "Inmates Question Judge on Laws."

Michael P. Doss, ’86, was mentioned in the July 14, 1986 National Law Journal article titled “U.S. Court Clerks Ships Still Luring Editors-in-Chief of Law Reviews.”

Professor Douglas N. Frenkel, ’72, appeared in the March, 1986 article in Arbitration Times titled “Education Task Force Spon­ sored for Second Year.”

A Message

Dean Robert H. Mundheim

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the Biddle Law Library's Centennial Celebration this evening, June 7, 1986.

A one-hundredth anniversary is an historic occasion and deserves a written record. This souvenir program serves as that and will be one of the mementos of this birthday party; in its pages, we can look back over the last century with Mark Lloyd and Libby Harwitz as they review the histories of the Library and the Law School.

You'll find we've come a long way since 1886 when the idea of a Library took hold and slowly began to build. By 1890, the Biddle Law Library had its own specially designed section of the brand new building at 3400 Chestnut Street. Every modern facility had been thought of and was available. The 1900 Library had "a desk for each student which provided a lock closet for notes, and an electric bell to call a boy who carried the book slip to the desk and brought back the wanted volumes".

Librarian Elizabeth Kelly will tell you in these pages how 86 years later, computer, telecommunications, and video technology are making the gathering, storage and dissemination of legal information miraculously fast and efficient. She will also sketch the Biddle Law Library of the future and our commitment to make this the finest resource of its kind, both for the Law School and for the legal community.

The extraordinary support you have shown gives me great confidence that the growth and expansion of services during the second century of the Biddle Law Library will be even more remarkable than the first. Thank you for joining in this 100th anniversary party this evening. Your enthusiastic participation tonight and throughout the year is a real cause for celebration!
CONGRATULATIONS!

A 72 YEAR OLD "YOUNGSTER"!
EARLY HISTORY OF THE BIDDLE LAW LIBRARY

Mark Frazier Lloyd
University Archivist

The Biddle Law Library was originally known as the Biddle Memorial Library for it was the death of George Biddle on 6 April 1886 which set in motion the events which led to the establishment of the Law School’s library. George Biddle was the eldest son of George Washington Biddle, who was perhaps Philadelphia’s most influential lawyer of his day. The son had followed his father’s career in the profession of law. He had “read law” in his father’s office, attended the law lectures offered by the Law Department of the University for the school year 1865–6, and been admitted to the bar on 17 November 1866. His death at the age of 43 was a great loss to the father and entire family.

George Washington Biddle had been counsel to the University and in 1882 the recipient of an honorary Doctor of Laws. Since 1880 he had been chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association (then known as the Law Association of Philadelphia). In addition to his professional honors he had what must have been the enormous personal satisfaction of seeing all three of his sons — George, Algernon Sydney and Arthur emulate his career and become successful lawyers. Little did he realize that he would outlive all three and little did anyone know that the Biddle Law Library would be his tribute to them.

University records do not make clear when George Washington Biddle first offered the Law Department a large private collection of legal reports as the nucleus of a memorial library. What is known is that negotiations were under way, but not completed in August 1887. In that month the Provost, William Pepper, informed the Secretary of the Law Faculty, C. Stuart Patterson, that the proposed gift had not yet been finalized. Provost Pepper instructed the deletion from the 1887–8 Law Department catalogue of a paragraph announcing the new library. Pepper was perhaps being overly cautious for the gift was soon thereafter formally made and in October accepted by the University’s Board of Trustees.

It was still another year, however, before the “George Biddle Memorial Library” came into use. The struggle between those who wanted the Law Department located near the courts and law offices downtown and those who wanted it on campus had been resolved in favor of downtown. In the 1888–9 school year the Law Department was located in City Hall, using the Pennsylvania Supreme Court room as its lecture hall. The memorial library, some 5,350 volumes in all, was delivered to these quarters and a librarian hired in December 1888. By the summer of 1889 now Dean Patterson could report that "a book catalogue has been completed during the year and a card catalogue will shortly be completed." Organizing the new library must have been a formidable task, however, as the first year law student who had been employed as librarian resigned his job in May 1889 and withdrew from the Law Department never to return to the field again. What is fascinating, of course, is that this man was Lightner Witmer who went on to earn a Masters degree in Philosophy from the University, a Doctorate in Psychology from the University of Leipzig and in 1896, at the University, founded this country's first psychological clinic. By the time of his retirement in 1937 Professor Witmer was one of Pennsylvania's most honored sons. Had it not been for the Biddle Law Library Lightner Witmer may never have found his life's calling.

In May of 1887 George Washington Biddle’s second son, Algernon Sydney, was elected Professor of Law by the University Trustees. His fields were "Practice, Pleading and Evidence at Law" and "Criminal Law." Though just thirty-nine years old the younger Biddle had developed a large law practice and was preceptor to many of the students who attended the lectures of the Law Department. It was he who introduced the seminar or case method of teaching in the school and popularized it to such an extent that by 1900 almost all the courses used that teaching technique. What a shock it must have been to all when he died suddenly on 8 April 1891. He left a widow and four sons, one of whom, Francis Biddle, eventually enjoyed a distinguished legal career of his own, including the Attorney Generalship of the United States during World War II.

George Washington Biddle wished to memorialize his second son as he had done his first and in November 1891 offered to endow a Chair in the Law Department. The offer was accepted and in June 1893 George Wharton Pepper, student and protege of Professor Biddle, was elected the first Algernon Sydney Biddle Professor of Law. At the same time the name of the Law Library was changed to "The George Biddle and Algernon Sydney Biddle Library." By this time the Library had grown substantially. It had moved with the Law Department from City Hall to the Sixth Floor of the Girard Life Insurance Building at Broad and Chestnut Streets in 1890. Solomon Stanger Iszard, a graduate of the Law Class of 1889, had been appointed Librarian in 1890 and was assisted by several law students. He managed the Library's affairs for six years as its size grew to over 10,000 volumes. In 1895 he supervised the move of the Library from Broad and Chestnut Streets to Sixth and Chestnut, where the Law Department occupied buildings immediately adjacent to Independence Hall. Here the Department and its Library stayed for five years before moving to their present quarters in the spring of 1900. In 1896 Edmund Jones was made Librarian, but he resigned after just one year. It was in 1897 that Margaret Center Klingelsmith, a name still familiar to some of the older graduates today, was appointed Librarian. It was she who literally and figuratively brought the Biddle Law Library to 34th and Chestnut Streets and into the twentieth century.

George Washington Biddle lived to see his only surviving son, Arthur, die on 8 March 1897. By that time the elder Biddle too was in failing health. He died on 29 April 1897. The Biddle family, however, paid tribute to the third son just as it had his brothers. This time the gift to the Library was the personal collection of Arthur Biddle. It numbered nearly 4,000 volumes and represented the accumulation of two generations and four members of the family. Shortly before the Law Department moved to its new building at 34th and Chestnut, the name of the Library was changed for the second and last time. It became "The Biddle Law Library" and so has remained to the present day.
Bell of Pennsylvania salutes the Biddle Law Library on its first 100 years of service and achievement.

BIDDLE'S SECOND CENTURY:

To paraphrase the poet, we can expect that the flowering of the future is present in today's bud, and that we will recognize in tomorrow's blooms the characteristics of their root stock and of today's plant. Biddle, in its second century, will be different, strikingly different, from the Biddle Library of the 1960s. But the differences will themselves grow from changes blossoming even now around us. And the familiar aspects of the past will be those aspects of individuality and quality which we selectively preserve for the future.

The elegant neo-Georgian reading rooms have never claimed functionality among their virtues. But happily we can expect they will be a part of Biddle's future. New generations of law students will routinely spend time in their uplifting space and carry with them throughout life a nostalgia for the shape and the feel of this distinctive building.

The physical book itself will not disappear, but, as the second century flies by, computer chip books will replace paper books in everyday use. Printed books will likely become valuable artifacts, like the Edison phonograph and seventeenth century silver. Telecommunications and computer technology will increasingly allow the Library's contents to be pervasively accessible throughout the Law School complex and from law offices and homes. Yet the Library (and the Law School) will exist because the coming together of people sparks inquiry, kindles enthusiasm, and refines judgments.

Librarians will be a familiar part of the future of Biddle Library. Their services will be needed more than ever. When the invention of the printing press changed libraries from manuscript collections to storehouses of the printed word, librarians' skills changed. When microforms, videotapes, and audiotapes become part of a library's stock, librarians' skills changed again. The emergence, and now proliferation, of electronic data bases and electronic publishing is once again causing librarians to learn new information retrieval techniques. New generations of law librarians will continue to be invaluable for their indexing expertise, their ability to locate relevant legal information in a variety of formats, and their role in teaching others those research skills.

What else can we predict about Biddle in its second century?

We expect Biddle to have a global collection of primary legal authority, analysis, and commentary which will be richer than at any time in its past.

We expect that the retrieval of relevant texts from Biddle's collection, as well as from the other libraries in other places, will be much more precise and efficient as a result of indexing software and advances in telecommunications.

We anticipate the Library to be more comfortable, to provide a variety of student study environments including casual seating, group study rooms, computer and video self-help labs, and to provide spacious individual study carrels for law students.

We expect electronic aids, whether they are microprocessor stations, video screens or optical disc display units, will be as common and as essential as the telephone has been in a lawyer's office.

In its Second Century of Quality, the Library can be a much more effective force in the educational enterprise of the Law School; the main event, however, will still take place in the minds of the students and faculty.

The newly-renovated Gateway

The Sylvan M. Cohen Gateway to Biddle Law Library
Never before have the complexities of law and legislative intent been so randomly dispersed in a maze of published reports, background materials, and official documents.

Without the proper research aids, even the most logical minds have little advantage in digging through the output of the U.S. Congress or the myriad other sources of government information. Yet to do a complete, accurate, and up-to-date analysis, legal researchers must thoroughly examine these vast information mills.

That is why CIS services are so popular. They allow library users to quickly and easily extract the exact piece of needed information from millions of pages of published material. Each of our “current awareness” systems includes indexes and abstracts that provide ready identification and evaluation of source publications. Each system is updated monthly and can be used in printed form, or searched online using a remote computer terminal. We also publish finding aids for significant bodies of historical material.

And with our microfiche collections in your library, researchers can retrieve and review the full texts of source publications in minutes.

The best lawyer always strives to obtain the best information. By acquiring CIS access systems for your library, you can help assure that its users always have a fighting chance.

And that is a very pointed argument.

The Biddle Law Library: Growing and Changing

Sheldon Hackney, President
University of Pennsylvania

It has been said that "libraries are not made; they grow." Starting out as a reflection of a human mind, individual collections take on a life of their own, continuing to develop as the result of love and care as much as through any act of will. During the first decades of its existence, the Biddle Law Library was nurtured by a single family, whose members it memorialized by preserving that most personal testimony of an educated mind in action — a lifetime's accumulation of books.

Like all growing things, however, mature libraries require attention if they are not to run wild or go to seed. Just as today's School of Law is very different from a hundred years ago, so the demands on a modern library serving large numbers of students, faculty, and alumni have changed in unforeseeable ways. As we take stock of the distance we have come in the first century of the Biddle Law Library's existence, it is appropriate that we tend to the needs of the present and future.

Traditionally, libraries have provided access to worlds of knowledge through the written word. Today, their role has been amplified by new technologies, which make it possible for readers and researchers, who may not even be physically present in the library, to draw upon the information stored not only on our shelves but also in collections all over the world. Earlier this year, it gave me special pleasure to help dedicate the new Sylvan M. Cohen Gateway to the Biddle Law Library. This could well serve to symbolize the new age we have entered in which the library must provide a variety of different Gateways to learning and information. As technology permits Biddle's contents to become available electronically to people outside the University, access will double as outreach in the years ahead.

In supporting growth and change at the Biddle Law Library, we continue the good work that was begun one hundred years ago. I applaud the activities of the Friends of Biddle, and those involved in the ongoing Biddle endowment campaign, and I would like to congratulate everyone responsible for this evening's gala event. Good wishes and thanks to you all.

THE BIDDLE ENDOWMENT FUND

Don Myers
Director of Development

The rebuilding program at Biddle has been necessary because of the impact of three external factors on law library funds during the 1970s: the explosion of legal information, runaway inflation and the weakness of the dollar against foreign currency.

Reestablishing a state-of-the-art law library has been difficult for Biddle since it now must spend money, remedially, to buy the best of what should have been purchased during those years. At the same time, Biddle must protect for the future many items in its rich collection that are deteriorating in their present form.

The infusion of endowment income is the best mechanism to provide the funds needed to assure Biddle's continuing eminence. Once in place, additions to the endowment will permit it to perform the functions traditionally associated with endowments, i.e., the enrichment of aspects of the collection, reflecting the strengths of the faculty and the uniqueness of the curricular offerings.

A named fund with the endowment can be established for a gift of $75,000, in any of the following areas:

- A Preservation Fund
- A Technology Fund

This centennial endowment effort is under the leadership of William White, L'38, former managing partner of Duane, Morris & Heckscher. Further information is available from Bill White or the Law School Development Office.

FRIENDS OF BIDDLE

Stephanie E. Kallen
Director, Law Alumni Affairs

Over the past three years, Friends of Biddle has helped immeasurably to reestablish Biddle Library among its peer institutions. The purpose of the Friends effort is to raise $100,000 annually for the purchase of books and materials. In the year 1984-85 the Library was able to acquire more physical volumes than all but four or five academic law libraries in the country. The Friends' program has increased Biddle's book expenditure budget; it has helped the Library begin the important task of providing computer capability to law students; and it has installed a book theft protection system. The legal information explosion and the technological delivery of this information will continue to demand considerable resources, and the Friends of Biddle is committed to answering these needs.

Under the leadership of Sylvan M. Cohen, Chairman of the Friends of Biddle annual campaign, an Advisory Council has been formed to bring the Library to the attention of alumni and other interested donors. Friends of Biddle is prepared to meet the Library's future demands by continuing to build a strong base for the purchase of books.

A Special Place

Libraries are special places and the Biddle Law Library is a special library. The ideas and actions recorded in libraries enable planning for the future to build on experiences of the past. Over the next 100 years — as in the last — the Biddle Law Library will have a central role in legal education, legal scholarship, and legal practice.

We have come a long way from the time when Christopher Columbus Langdell compared law libraries to the laboratories of scientists. But libraries still are focal points for law schools to a greater extent than is true for most other professional schools. Fortunately, the Biddle Law Library has grown and developed over the last century. Our challenge is to ensure that the Library gains the resources required to meet substantial challenges in the future. The Library faces acute needs to enhance its collections, its services, and its facilities. With your help, those needs will be met.

New technology is bringing remarkable shifts to the storage and retrieval of information, and law is certainly not immune from those shifts. I am a prime advocate for bringing the new technology to all of Penn’s libraries. The Biddle Law Library must be at the forefront in innovations that provide users with the best possible means for legal research, and these include a wide range of new equipment.

I am convinced, however, that books are not about to be replaced by computers or other machines, important as is the new technology. Books will, I believe, remain at the heart of the Library well past the next centennial celebration. In one of my favorite passages, Virginia Woolf wrote: "I have sometimes dreamt, at least, that when the Day of Judgment dawns and the great conquerors and lawyers and statesmen come to receive their rewards — their crowns, their laurels, their names carved indelibly upon imperishable marble — the Almighty will turn to Peter and will say, not without a certain envy when He sees us coming with our books under our arms, 'Look, these need no reward. We have nothing to give them here. They have loved reading.'" I am not clear what rewards Virginia Woolf had in mind for lawyers. The rewards for readers however, are apparent to all who have used and enjoyed the Biddle Law Library.

THE LAW SCHOOL:
A HISTORY
Libby S. Harwitz
Editor, The Law Alumni Journal

Franklin, Wilson, Hare, Sharswood, Lewis, Keedy, Roberts — all are names synonymous with the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Although the School's history is built around those figures, many probably are unaware of a persistent group whose strong desire to study law led to the creation of a center of legal learning in Philadelphia.

Nearly a decade ago, The Law Alumni Journal chronicled the School's beginnings and its development to 1977. At this 100th anniversary milestone of the Biddle Law Library, we again reflect on the growth and changes which have established the University of Pennsylvania Law School as one of this Nation’s premier institutions for legal education.

Benjamin Franklin’s ingenious and creative eye recognized the need for a local institution of higher learning. At that time, advanced education was available abroad or in the more-established colonies. In 1755, Franklin succeeded in chartering “the Academie and Charitable School” which, in 1789, became the University of Pennsylvania.

The Law Department was established in 1790. Credit for its inception goes to a group of “young gentlemen — not of the college — who had joined together to study law for their mutual improvement.” A committee consisting of Charles Willing Hare, Edward Shippen and James Wilson considered “the propriety and utility of establishing a law professorship”. Mr. Wilson presented a curriculum plan to the University Trustees setting forth courses “to furnish a rational and an useful entertainment to assist in forming the legislator, the magistrate, and the lawyer”.

The Law School at Congress Hall (1895-1900)
James Wilson, a statesman "well versed in areas ranging from classics to oratory", a leader at the Philadelphia Bar, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a framer of Pennsylvania's Constitution and, subsequently, an Associate Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, became the first Lecturer and Professor of Law. His first lecture was delivered on December 15, 1790 at "The Academy" on Fourth Street below Arch, an event which attracted a prominent audience including President and Mrs. Washington, members of the Cabinet and the Houses of Congress, the judges of the courts and "many of the women who led the brilliant society of the little Capital". Expecting a sober group to listen to his "quiet homily upon the law", Mr. Wilson was startled to find himself addressing the creme de la societe. A series of interruptions in Wilson's subsequent lectures, together with a decrease in student attendance, prevented both the completion of the Course and, as a result, the conferring of degrees during the Wilson Professorship.

The Wilson Chair remained vacant from 1791 until 1817 when, again, after student prod- ding, Charles Willing Hare was elected Law Professor by the University Trustees. Hare delivered one course but, shortly afterward, became "incapacitated mentally" — again frustrating another effort to advance legal education in Pennsylvania.

The Law Department was virtually nonexistent until 1832 when student persistence, again in the form of a strong petition to the University Trustees, urged the School's revival. The appeal was ignored despite the presence of signatures such as Biddle and Chew, Ingersoll and Cadwalader, Sergeant and Hopkinson.

It was 20 years later, in 1850, that the University Trustees elected the Honorable George Sharswood as Professor of Law. His first lecture, delivered on September 30, 1850, marked the true birthdate of the Department of Law. At this time, Trustees, students and Professor Sharswood were ready to share the commitment to establish a secure and lasting institute for the study of law. The School grew rapidly, prompting the increase in professorships and the appointment of Sharswood as Dean. But for the Civil War and its effect on attendance, the School flourished for ten years. Judge Sharswood remained Dean until his appointment to the Supreme Court in 1868, when E. Spencer Miller assumed the Deanship until 1872 at which time Edward Coppee Mitchell became Dean until 1887.

In 1871, Carrie S. Burnham Kilgore, the School's first woman applicant, applied for but was denied admission to the Department. After a ten-year struggle in the Pennsylvania Courts, she entered the School in 1881, receiving her Bachelor of Laws degree in 1883.

The Law Department has been headquartered at "The Academy", Fourth Street below Arch (1790-1802), at "The Presidential Mansion" (1802-1829), at "The Arts Building", Ninth and Chestnut Streets (1829-1873), at Congress Hall, Sixth and Chestnut Streets (1895-1900), at College Hall, on the University of Pennsylvania Campus (1873-1888) and, finally, at 34th and Chestnut Streets (1900-the present).

In 1887, George Tucker Blashpham was elected Dean. At that time, two additional professorships were instituted and the Biddle Law Library was established. Blashpham was succeeded in 1888 by G. Stuart Patterson when, during his Deanship, the two-year course of instruction was increased to three years, a necessary addition if the School was to be competitive with other law schools in the country.

In 1896, William Draper Lewis became the first full-time Dean. The School officially assumed publication of the American Law Register in 1897 which eventually became The University of Pennsylvania Law Review. On February 21, 1900, the neo-Georgian building of the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, at the corner of 34th and Chestnut Streets, was dedicated in the presence of three thousand guests — among them Oliver Wendell Holmes and William Howard Taft. William Draper Lewis held the Deanship until 1914 and was succeeded by William E. Milkell. In 1915, a college degree was made mandatory for admission to the School. Herbert F. Goodrich served as Dean from 1929 to 1940; his strong organizational abilities as well as those of Edwin R. Keedy, the Dean from 1941-45, brought the School through the trying war years. Earl G. Harrison was Dean from 1945-1948 and was followed by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, whose Deanship lasted three years. Professor Paul W. Bruton filled in as Acting Dean for one year prior to the appointment of Dean Jefferson B. Fordham, who remained in the Office from 1952-1970. It was during the Fordham Deanship that the School experienced considerable curriculum changes as well as growth in the physical plant. The dining hall and the residence dormitories were built in 1958 and 1959; the original main building was renovated in 1969. From 1970-1975, Law School Professor Bernard Wolfman, '48, was Dean. Former dean of the Yale Law School, Louis H. Pollak, assumed the Deanship in 1975 until his elevation to the Federal Bench in 1978. Covey T. Oliver, Ferdinand Wakeman Hubbell Professor of Law, served as Acting Dean from September 1978 to January 1979 prior to the appointment as Dean of Law School Professor, James O. Freedman who, in 1982 became President of the University of Iowa. Robert H. Mundheim, University Professor of Law and Finance, and the Dean since February 1982, has instituted numerous innovative programs and curricular changes such as the First-year Course in Professional Responsibility and the Legal Profession.

Present enrollment at the law School approximates 740 full-time students. The core Faculty numbers about thirty full-time members of the rank of assistant professor and above. There are six Clinical Faculty members, two Senior Fellows, thirty-two adjunct Faculty and nineteen third-year students who train first-year and Master of Law students in legal research and writing. The Faculty also includes two economists, a criminologist, and a psychiatrist who hold joint appointments at the Law School and at the University of Pennsylvania.

There are approximately 7300 living Penn Law Alumni /ae, located in all of the United States and in forty-five foreign countries, engaged in the practice of law and represented in the judiciary, in academia, in various branches of the government and in the upper echelons of the business community.

The University of Pennsylvania Law School's struggle from a one-professor institution in 1790 to an operation of its present magnitude was slow and, at times, tenuous. It is now certain that the School's first two hundred formative years have served as a strong foundation for its entrance into the Twenty-First Century.

FEATURED EVENTS

LAW ALUMNI DAY - 1986

Featuring

Senator Bill Bradley

and

Professor Noyes Leech

The Law Alumni Society's Annual Law Alumni Day, held on April 11, 1986, was an occasion for appreciation and celebration.

In a moving ceremony held during the Annual Meeting, Professor Noyes E. Leech, '48, about to retire from the Law School at the close of the school year after thirty-seven years of teaching, was presented - by Dean Robert H. Mundheim - the Society's coveted Distinguished Service Award created "to recognize the achievements of present or past Faculty members or Alumni whose professional careers demonstrate those qualities of character, intellect and social and professional responsibility which the Law School nurtures." Professor Leech was given a Distinguished Service Scroll and a miniature stone and iron replica of Hsieh-Chai, the Law School Goat. (Dean Mundheim's Award presentation speech and Professor Leech's acceptance appear next in this issue of The Journal.)

Following a cocktail reception in The Great Hall, the Law Alumni Day speaker, United States Senator Bill Bradley of the State of New Jersey was introduced by the President of the Law Alumni Society, Clive S. Cummis,'52. The Senator, in an engaging, informative speech, discussed Tax Reform and Tax Policy - defending the proposed Fair Tax Act. A staunch supporter of bi-partisan tax reform and an active lobbyist for the new tax reform proposal, Senator Bradley stated what recently has become fact: "Don't get too attached to our current tax code because, even though I may be in the minority, I still believe it will soon be changed, and we will get tax reform in 1986. I remember, in 1982, when I introduced tax reform and people laughed. Well, here we are today with a Republican President of the United States going way out on a limb to support tax reform proposals that drop the tax rate dramatically and broaden the tax base." Senator Bradley fielded questions from a most appreciative audience.

Dinner was followed by the Law Alumni Day Program presided over by Society President Cummins who presented the Distinguished Service Award Scroll to Professor Leech with the comment, "Noyes, as one of your former students and on behalf of every student that you taught, thank you for the impact you had on all of us." In appreciation of her "exemplary service to the Law Alumni Society over the years," former Society President, E. Barclay Cale, '71, 62, awarded a University of Pennsylvania ceremonial platter to Alice B. Lonsdorf, the Assistant Dean for Alumni Affairs, who left the Law School in July. Recognition was made by Eleanor M. Illoway, '83, the co-chair of the LL.M./Alumni Friendship Program, of the 100th Anniversary of the conferring of the LL.M. degree at the Law School. A plaque commemorating the event was presented to Dean Robert H. Mundheim and to the Law School by the 1986 LL.M. Class. Dean Mundheim offered the evening's closing remarks.
Presentation

of the Law Alumni Society’s Distinguished Service Award to Professor Noyes E. Leech

by Dean
Robert H. Mundheim

The Distinguished Service Award is the highest honor that the Law Alumni Society can bestow - an honor not given lightly. In the eighteen years since the Award’s creation, it has been given only ten times - the last in 1981 to [The Honorable] Arlin [M.] Adams [’47], the present Chairman of the Law School’s Board of Overseers. Noyes Leech, today’s honoree, richly deserves the Award, and I am honored to have been asked by the Law Alumni Society to present it to him.

Noyes is a true red-and-blue. He graduated from the college in 1943 and from the Law School in 1948. Although this is not a prerequisite to getting the Distinguished Service Award, Noyes like Judge Adams (as well as other Award recipients), was elected Editor-in-Chief of The University of Pennsylvania Law Review in his third-year of law school. With a short time out for the private practice of law in the Philadelphia firm of Dechert, Price & Rhoads, Noyes has spent almost all of his professional career at the Law School.

In a quiet understated way, Noyes Leech has been a powerful force in the Law School and at the University. I would like to talk about Noyes’s importance to us. One must begin by recounting his qualities as a teacher. The Law Alumni Society’s having conferred the Distinguished Service Award on Noyes is truly an accolade from his students. A few days ago, some present and some very recent graduates of the School were reminiscing about Noyes as a teacher. They mentioned that he did not lecture but asked questions and, in their words, ‘‘let us find our own way’’. That, to me is an important hallmark of a great educator. These Alumni also said, ‘‘he inspired us to be the best that we could be, and he cheered us on our successes’’.

This Law School always has prided itself in the scholarly attainments of its Faculty, and Noyes has made many important scholarly contributions. By that, I do not mean that Noyes published a book of material, but, for example, his article on sale of control entitled ‘‘Transactions in Corporate Control,’’ Volume 104, University of Pennsylvania Law Review, 725-839 (1956), was and is a classic. It contains a carefully balanced handling of material and a topic chosen because it poses a major question of enduring significance. Two of Noyes’s major contributions to scholarship are his casebooks: one, The International Legal System, and the other, Corporations. Again, the materials in these books are not overwhelmingly long but the analytical threads are clear and concise. It is for these reasons that I found teaching from his Corporations casebook such a joy.

Of course, there is more to Noyes’s bibliography than what I have briefly mentioned. I think the piece that Noyes published in Volume 8 of The Journal of Comparative Business and Capital Market Law entitled ‘‘International Banking: Effects of Nationalizations and Exchange Controls’’ is a beautiful example of a mature scholar’s ability both to articulate complex issues so that they may be understood and to develop arguments with fairness, with precision and with balance. It reminds us that scholarly work differs materially from the advocate’s work - a point that is not always fully appreciated in modern scholarship.

‘‘This Law School always has prided itself in the scholarly attainments of its Faculty, and Noyes has made many.. contributions.’’

To a fellow faculty member, colleagueship is of primary importance. Teaching is essentially a lonely profession, and the support of colleagues makes an enormous difference. I first met Noyes Leech in 1965 when I came to this Law School and, at that time, already regarded him as a senior member of the Faculty. (Actually, as I think about it, he was much younger than I am today). Noyes’s influence on me was of great importance. I remember that his door was always open and, if I had spent time thinking about an issue, he willingly served as my sounding-board and as my advisor. He did not pursue me; Noyes felt that a senior colleague ought not to suffocate a junior colleague - but that he always should be there if the junior needed support. And when I gave him a draft of my article on suitability (an emerging concept in defining the duties of brokers and dealers in securities), he read it promptly and was ready with questions which helped me to better understand the problem with which I was dealing. He forced me to articulate the solutions and the reasons for those solutions in a succinct and clear fashion so that, as Noyes likes to say, ‘‘now it sings’’. Noyes helped to shape my ideas; he did not lecture on his ideas.

Building a faculty is an important continuing item on the Law School agenda, and senior Faculty play an important role in how well that function is performed. Looking at what can properly be called ‘‘the Leech products’’ - Noyes’s contributions to the Faculty appointments process: Reitz, Freedman, Gorman, Mundheim and, that youngest in Law School years, Aronstein - one can agree that it is a formidable list. Building a faculty also means serving on appointments committees, reading the scholarly works of others and being willing to make difficult decisions even if it is more comfortable to go along with popular sentiment. Noyes chaired the Appointments Committee of this Law School in 1959-60, 1961-62, 1963-64, 1976-77 and 1981-82. He served as a member of that crucial Committee for more years than could possibly be demanded of a Faculty member.

The fact that dean-after-dean asked Noyes to serve on the Appointments Committee is a testament to the confidence in his judgment which each of the Deans felt. Jeff Fordham asked Noyes to chair so many committees during his deanship that he simply called him ‘‘Mr. Chairman’’.

The University, also, has turned to Noyes when it needed wise counsel and balanced leadership. The Faculty elected him Chairman of the University Senate; he served on two major University task forces on University Governance - one which formalized the faculty’s consultative role concerning appointment to various positions within the University, and the other which worked out procedures for tenure review.

Noyes has served the Law School in other ways: He is the co-founder of the International Faculty for Corporate and Capital Market Law - a group of seventeen academics from nine countries who have usually met at least once a year for the last twelve years. Out of the work of this group, including its organization of a series of conferences on major issues in corporate law, securities regulation and the law governing financial institutions, there developed a need to establish a journal to publish the writings of the International Faculty and others. Noyes and a colleague founded The Journal of Comparative Business and Capital Market Law and both served as its general editors. That Journal, which will be known as The Journal of International Business Law, is publishing its eighth volume and has become very much a fixture at this Law School. With over forty members on its Board of Editors, it serves as a second law review at the Law School, and makes an important contribution to the School’s intellectual life.

The new Editor-in-Chief of The Journal has just announced that an issue of Volume 8 will be dedicated to Noyes Leech, the highest tribute which The Journal can bestow.

I would like to mention one more matter which is of particular importance to the Law Alumni Society - and that is the Gilbert and Sullivan tradition. That tradition, too, has an important link to Noyes Leech. Some time ago, Bob Gorman wanted to provide an opportunity for students and faculty to serenade the Law School during Christmas time. Bob went to his colleague, Professor Leech, and asked ‘‘How can we get it done?’’ That was the moment of conception for the Ains-Ar-
Law. That group of serenaders was greeted with such resounding success that the Gorman-Leech team produced a concert for the spring which included a medley of songs from Trial By Jury. Student enthusiasm for the concerts evolved into our annual Gilbert and Sullivan productions. The Law Alumni Society, of course, has been a prime supporter of the Gilbert and Sullivan tradition at the Law School. How typical that Noyes Leech is so bound up with a tradition of which we, in the Alumni Society, are so fond.

All of us at this Law School are proud of its special qualities. These qualities, however, are not products of accident; they result from the efforts of individuals who shape this institution, and they are individuals who care deeply about the Law School and about the values that it should foster. In my twenty years at this Law School, I never have known anyone who cared more about the Law School than Noyes Leech. Thus, it seems to me entirely appropriate that the Law Alumni Society should recognize a career devoted to this Law School by honoring Noyes E. Leech as the 11th recipient of the Distinguished Service Award.

Let me now read the citation: "His distinguished service as an internationally-recognized scholar and teacher and as a wise and concerned colleague whose energy, imagination and advice have made the Law School and the University more effectively educational institutions, reflects the quality of character, intellect and responsibility which the Law School community cherishes." Noyes Leech, it gives me great pleasure to present to you Hsieh-Chai, the Law School Goat, the symbol of the Law Alumni Society's Distinguished Service Award.

IN APPRECIATION

by

Professor

Noyes E. Leech

Bob, it is very good that I am about ready to retire. Having gone through this moving experience, I will not be fit to live with for a long time.

I am immensely honored to be a member of that special group of Law Alumni Society Distinguished Service Award recipients. Frankly, I was anxious to be here today to learn just what it was that I had done to deserve the Award. But, as I said to Louise earlier, all they really can say is that I was doing my job. And that is just what it was.

The mellow strains of brass playing Elgar set the tone for what was a perfect Commencement celebration on Monday, May 19, 1986.

Dean Robert H. Mundheim welcomed the gathering and introduced Jay S. Silver who, as the representative of his fellow L.L.M. graduate students, expressed gratitude for the University of Pennsylvania Law School experience for the year 1985-86.

Class President, Patty Shwartz, in an address to her colleagues and their families, the Law School Faculty and the invited guests, noted that "The Class of 1986 has been characterized as a positive and forward-looking group of people. Apathy will not keep us down. [We are]... bright, energetic, and imaginative individuals... academically, artistically and athletically talented. [We] have successfully completed the rigours of the Law School's curriculum while contributing to the community of which [we] have been a part. [Our] families have...the right to beam with pride on this - graduation day...The people who [comprise] Penn Law are a special group who made Law School an almost humane experience. The graduates of the Class of 1986 may some day admit that, if they had to attend a law school [to achieve their goals], they were glad that they [chose] Penn."

Dean Mundheim then conferred Law School Honorary Fellowship on Millard C. Farmer, Esquire, of Atlanta, Georgia who, "Since

I appreciate this Award so much because it is a symbol of Alumni appreciation of the fullness of what is required of a law professor who teaches at this University. Our Society has given institutions like the University of Pennsylvania and this Law School the right to be self-guardians and, in many ways, to set their own standards. This is accomplished by members of the Faculty who assume responsibilities beyond those of being in the classroom and of producing articles and books. I must confess, however, that there were times when I felt that I taught for fun and for free, and that the Law School paid me to be on the Appointments Committee! But seriously, we all do these things. We all serve on the Appointments Committee; we all form the curriculum and beat it into shape each year - constantly considering and revising it. We -all of us - are concerned with matters of Placement and of the Library. We - all of us - read files for Admissions. The life of a law professor is far beyond what one thinks of as the responsibilities of a teacher. And it is because of these reasons that I truly appreciate this Award because it symbolizes the recognition of just these factors.

As I mentioned before, I am close to retirement. In taking present stock of the Law School, I feel good about it. The School has an Administration which is looking forward - not just to its day-to-day needs. The School has a brilliant Faculty - it is young and it is glittering. It has a remarkable and outstanding student body - I like to think of it sometimes as a group of thoroughbred race horses. Finally, I would like to say that this Law School has you, Ladies and Gentlemen - a loving Alumni body. Thank you very much.

leaving a traditional practice setting to establish Team Defense in 1976, [has] been a tireless and effective advocate for breaking established discriminatory patterns in the administration of justice, particularly as they operate against the poor and minorities in death penalty cases. Your work, sometimes done at personal risk, has saved the lives of innocent people sentenced to execution and has sensitized polarized communities to basic concepts of fairness in its justice system. Your work has reformed courtroom procedures, community attitudes and the law. Your holistic interdisciplinary approach, combining client representation, community organization and education, and social science research is a model of creativity in lawyering for our profession. We hold you in esteem and commend your example to the generation of lawyers who go forth from this School."

Mr. Farmer's provocative acceptance speech was followed by comments from Honorary Member of the Class of 1986, The Honorable Morris S. Arnold, of the United States District Court for the Western District of Arkansas, formerly a Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Clyde W. Summers, the Jefferson B. Fordham Professor of Law, the choice of the Class of 1986 for the Harvey Levin Memorial Award for Teaching Excellence then addressed the Commencement gathering.

Assistant Dean Alice B. Lonsdorf and Vice-Dean Margo Post Marshak presented the Class of 1986 to Dean Robert H. Mundheim, who awarded diplomas. A reception in honor of the Class of '86 and their families followed graduation ceremonies.

The Faculty

Professor Stephen B. Burbank officially became Professor of Law effective July 1, 1986. He spent the year 1985-86 on sabbatical and visiting at the University of Michigan. His article, “Interjurisdictional Preclusion, Full Faith and Credit and Federal Common Law: A General Approach,” appears in 71 Cornell L. Rev. 733-832 (1986). In August, Mr. Burbank appeared as an invited witness before the subcommittee on the Constitution of the Senate Judiciary Committee, testifying in opposition to proposed constitutional amendments concerning federal officers who are convicted of felonies (the amendments would provide for automatic forfeiture of office and compensation).

In September, Professor Burbank spoke on current issues in federal judicial discipline at the National Conference for Judicial Conduct Organizations in Chicago. As of July 1, 1986, Mr. Burbank has been a consultant to the Philadelphia firm of Dechert, Price & Rhoads.

Professor Robert A. Gorman was appointed Chairman of the Faculty of the 1987 Salzburg Seminar in American Law to be held in Austria in July, 1987. The Tenth Edition of Cox, Bok & Gorman, Cases on Labor Law, was published in July 1986 by The Foundation Press. With the assistance of a grant for research in Labor Law, donated by the Law School Class of 1933 to honor the memory of their late classmate, Jerome L. Markovitz, Mr. Gorman spent one week in London studying Industrial Tribunals and protection of workers against unjust dismissal. He taught a course in Copyright in the three-week January 1986 term at Harvard Law School. Professor Gorman served as Chair of the American Bar Association/American Law Schools site inspection team for accreditation of the University of Southern California Law Center. He was elected to a three-year term on the National Council, the governing body of the American Association of University Professors.

Professor Richard G. Lonsdorf, M.D. presented "Law, Psychiatry, Medicine and Tragic Choices," a noncredit course offered by the University of Pennsylvania as part of the University of Pennsylvania's College of General Studies, in March and April of 1986. On April 25, 1986, Dr. Lonsdorf was a panelist at the Sixth Annual Compensation Seminar sponsored by the Pennsylvania Defense Institute.

Donald G. Myers, Director of Development, chaired a morning session at the Conference on Law School Development jointly sponsored by the American Association of Law School Section on Institutional Advancement and the Development Committee of the American Bar Association Section of Legal Education and Admission to the Bar. The conference was held at the New York University School of Law in August.

Visiting Associate Professor David Baudovsky, who has been a lecturer at the School since 1971, is the recipient of a MacArthur Fellowship - the "Genius" Award conferred by that Foundation giving monetary prizes with "no strings" attached.

Assistant Professor Paul Sheehan has been working with Whitney North Seymour, Jr., in the Office of Independent Counsel investigating the activities of former Presidential aide Michael K. Deaver.

Professor Clyde W. Summers was the recipient of the 1986 Harvey Levin Award for Teaching Excellence given for his "sincere devotion to his students, to this Law School, and to the field of Labor Law" by the graduating Class of 1986 at their Commencement in May.

Professor W.A.J. (Alan) Watson was designated a University Professor this past spring.

Reunion Weekend

May 16-17

On Saturday afternoon, from 1:30 pm to 3:00 pm, Dean Robert H. Mundheim greeted over one-hundred spirited returning Law Alumni with a champagne toast and a specially guided tour of the School and the Biddle Library.

Quinquennial Reunion events were held on Friday and Saturday evenings at a variety of sites in the Philadelphia area. Dean Mundheim was able to visit most of the parties to extend best wishes from the Law School. The Class of 1931 celebrated its 55th Reunion on Friday evening, May 16 at the Locust Club of Philadelphia. The Honorable Herbert S. Levin was the chief organizer of the event. On Saturday, May 17, The Honorable Joseph S. Lord, III, chaired the Class of 1936 50th Reunion gala held at the Locust Club of Philadelphia. The Class of 1941's 45th Reunion was held at The Barclay. Classmate Chester C. Hilsinski together with The Honorable Paul M. Chaffin organized that gala. Through the able planning of Classmate, Mickey Becket, the Class of 1951 celebrated 45 years as graduates of Penn Law School at the Aronimink Golf Club in Suburban Philadelphia. The Class of 1956 held its 30th Reunion at The City Tavern in Society Hill. Alumni Ted Beatty, The Honorable Dolores Sovlter and Harris Ominsky chaired '56’s successful dinner party. The office of Classmate Paul Arapal was the site where the Class of 1961 gathered for cocktails prior to their gala 25th Reunion party at The Barclay. Class of '61 members, Wilfred Lorry and Bob Rosin, coordinated the evening’s festivities. Shadwell Farms, better known as "Betsy and Ed Cohen’s farm," was where the Class of 1966 gathered for its well-attended 20th Reunion. The Class of 1971 held its 15th Reunion dinner at Raymond Haldeman in Philadelphia, with Classmates Steven L. Friedman and Craig Lord as the event organizers. The dinner was attended by Professors Martin Aronstein, Paul Mishkin, Robert Gorman and James Strazzella and their wives. The Class of '71 also hosted a luncheon at the University's Faculty Club on Saturday afternoon, May 17. John A. Terrill with the help of '76 Classmate, Martha Bush, organized the Class of 1976's 10th Reunion celebration at The College of Physicians and Surgeons in Philadelphia. The Class of 1981, through the diligent planning of Nancy Gierlich, held its 5th Reunion in the Courtyard and Goat areas of The Law School. One very special note: Quinquennial Reunion milestone or not, the Law School Class of 1939 holds a Class Reunion each year - and has done so since its graduation forty-seven years ago.
