

March 19, 2019

Rethinking Immigration Enforcement: A Law Review and Penn Law Immigrant Rights Project Author Lunch with Prof. Eisha Jain

Time: 12:00pm - 1:30pm

Location: Silverman 240A

Join Law Review and the Penn Law Immigrant Rights Project for a conversation with Professor Eisha Jain about her research and work on her article in Volume 167, Rethinking Immigration Enforcement.

Eisha Jain is an Associate Professor of Law at University of North Carolina School of Law. Professor Jain's research focuses on the blurring boundaries between civil and criminal law. Here, Professor Jain provides a framework for understanding the interior structure of immigration enforcement. While applying her structure, Professor Jain introduces a vocabulary for understanding the implications of long-term surveilling and monitoring an undocumented population. Ultimately, this article calls for rethinking immigration enforcement not just as a question of who ought to be removed, but rather from the perspective of how enforcement choices affect the vast majority who remain.

Free

Contact Info:

Frank Broomell, broof@pennlaw.upenn.edu

Feedback