Law Review Author Lunch: "Rate Regulation Redux" by Joshua Macey and Jackson Salovaara

Time: 12:00pm

Location: Gittis 213, Kushner Classroom

The Law Review has invited Professor Joshua Macey from Cornell Law School and Jackson Salovaara from SB Energy. Rate Regulation Redux provides an in-depth exploration of how public utility regulation has disfavored renewables and counteracted state clean energy policies. The authors push back against the recent scholarly trend, which argues that federal agencies should resurrect principles of public utility regulation in order to realize progressive policy goals across virtually every facet of the administrative state. The Article shows that the one experience with this form of regulation has failed to accomplish environmental goals and has instead transformed into a protectionist regulatory scheme that provides an enormous benefit to incumbent technologies.

Lunch from Hummus Grill will be provided. All are welcome!
