Please join Professors Kevin Werbach and Christopher Yoo for a discussion on key issues in communications law and policy that are likely to emerge in 2021. Topics of discussion will include the need for greater broadband availability and adoption revealed by the COVID-19 pandemic, calls for a new agency to regulate online platforms, the suspension of former President Trump’s Twitter account, growing bipartisan support for expanding liability of online intermediaries by amending the Communications Decency Act (Section 230), potential US/China technological decoupling, and the possible return of network neutrality. Given time and interest, technology policy issues beyond communications, such as AI Ethics and cryptocurrency regulation, may also be covered.
