

Law School Events

September 23, 2021

Responding to “Unequivocal” Climate Change: Legal and Policy Implications of the Latest IPCC Report

🎥 4:00pm - 5:00pm EDT

Contact Info:

Anna Gavin
regulation@law.upenn.edu

Related Content:

Related: Register for the

This panel discussion, which will be held over Zoom, is part of Penn’s Climate Week. It will examine what the report, issued in July 2021, suggests about the future of U.S. climate change law and policy.

Register for the webinar here

This panel discussion on the legal and policy implications of the recent IPCC report will feature perspectives from leading climate policy experts, including Nathaniel Keohane, President of the Center for Climate and Energy Solutions, and Shelley Welton, Associate Professor of Law at the University of South Carolina School of Law. Professor Cary Coglianese, Director of the Penn Program on Regulation, will moderate.

This event was planned collaboratively with Penn's Environmental Innovations Initiative.

PPR

