

that the judge should be given more latitude in the trial of cases. Unfortunately the popular tendency is the other way, as legislation is not infrequent which aims to deny to the trial judge the right to comment and express his opinion upon the weight of the evidence. As judges are relegated to the position of mere umpires, shallow and sometimes unscrupulous lawyers, to say nothing of ignorant juries, are apt to make the administration of justice in the trial of causes a sham and a delusion. Of course, the advocacy of the doctrine that greater, not less, power should be given to the trial judge, must be accompanied by the admission that the political systems in vogue in America are not always conducive to the best results in selecting judges, and the hope that some day we will succeed in more uniformly approaching the high standards which exist in England in this respect.

On the whole, Professor Bruce's book is a well-written, sane, and intensely interesting volume. The expression of thought is clear, the evident purpose earnest. Lawyers, legislators, judges and indeed all educated persons should read "The American Judge" with thoughtful care, and render what aid they can toward an improvement of the conditions which it describes.

Horace Stern.

Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia.

---

OTHER BOOKS RECEIVED.

CASES ON CONFLICT OF LAWS. Second edition. By Ernest G. Lorenzen, Professor of Law in Yale University. West Publishing Company, St. Paul, Minn., 1924, pp. xxiii, 1096.

LAW OF EVIDENCE IN CIVIL CASES. By Burr W. Jones, sometime professor of the Law School of the University of Wisconsin. Third edition by William Carey Jones, late dean of the School of Jurisprudence in the University of California. Bancroft-Whitney Company, San Francisco, 1924, pp. xxvi, 1661.

OXFORD STUDIES IN SOCIAL AND LEGAL HISTORY. Volume VIII. Edited by Sir Paul Vinogradoff, Corpus Professor in Oxford University. Article XIII—Early Treatises On the Practice of the Justices of the Peace in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Centuries. By B. H. Putnam, Ph. D., Lecturer at Mt. Holyoke College. Oxford University Press, New York, 1924, pp. viii, 424.

THE SEVEN LAMPS OF ADVOCACY. By His Honour Judge Edward Abbott Parry. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, 1924, pp. 110.

THE SAAR CONTROVERSY—THE GROTIUS SOCIETY PUBLICATIONS. Number Two. By W. R. Bisschop, LL. D., of Lincoln's Inn and the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-law. Sweet and Maxwell, Ltd., London, 1924, pp. 186.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE GROTIUS SOCIETY. Vol. 9. Problems of Peace and War. Sweet and Maxwell, Ltd., London, 1924, pp. xxxix, 163.