

knowledge, it is fraudulent, if the party who made it was aware that his statement was in fact merely an opinion or belief: Id.

If a fraudulent representation is material and relied on, the party deceived is entitled to recover damages, even though the jury should think he would have made the purchase without this representation. What the party would have done if the fraudulent inducement had not been held out, is a mere speculative inquiry, and not the test of the plaintiff's right: Id.
